CARES, GAIL, Museum Budgets Are Presented to City Council

by Judy Bell

Director Liz Park demonstrated CARES' many Fiscal Year 2005 accomplishments with a presentation at the April 17 Greenbelt City Council budget worksession. Among the accomplishments were running skill-building and discussion groups at three area schools and truancy prevention groups at Roosevelt and Duval High Schools. At Springhill Lake Elementary School CARES sponsored both anger management groups and decision-making skills groups as well as a second year of the Strengthening Families program. These school programs have been added to a continuing series of other activities – its core services of counseling, GED preparation courses, babysitting courses, tutoring and the Advisory Committee on Education.

Park said that some additional space has been made available to CARES with the first-floor conference room becoming office space for staff. CARES continues to have a long waiting list for counseling services, however. An additional counselor to alleviate this problem would add $20,000 to the Fiscal Year 2006 budget of $384,900. Of the budgeted amount $84,000 is funded through state, county and GED co-payments.

Management objectives for CARES include developing a strategic plan for the department with a mission statement, values statement and short- and long-term goals and offering an adult skills development group.

GAIL

Park went on to present the budget for the Greenbelt Assistance in Living program headed by Community Resource Advocate Christal Parker Batey. This program, known as GAIL, has now been placed under the CARES umbrella.

Goals so far accomplished for GAIL included establishment of a new intern position to provide services to seniors, the hiring of a senior van aide (public works), obtaining a service coordinator for Green Ridge House (funded through a HUD grant) and providing counseling services for seniors. GAIL also has partnered with Community Crisis Services, Inc., to secure funding for the Greenbelt Suicide Prevention Program, as well as creating a partnership with the Bowie State University nursing program to provide weekly health visits to Greenbelt residents.

The GAIL FY06 budget totals $85,200.

Management objectives for GAIL include developing a preferred provider program for home health care for Greenbelt residents and offering a money management program for seniors (in conjunction with AARP).

Museum

Steven Oetken, president of the Friends of the Greenbelt Museum (FOGM), announced that the museum is now $500 away from raising $30,000 for the second phase of a $100,000 National Endowment for the Humanities matching grant, which must be completed by July. The museum expects to receive $10,000 from the city, $10,000 from Prince George's County Councilmember Douglas Peters and $10,000 from the Marjorie Patterson Foundation.

"Green Concrete" Attracts Attention at Area Festivals

by Barbara Simon

About 85 people viewed "Green Concrete," an animated short created by young people in the GAVA/GATE Animation Program, when it was screened as part of the 13th Annual Environmental Film Festival on March 16. The Washington, D.C. 10-day festival showed over 100 films from 22 countries to "challenge and broaden our . . . perception and understanding of the complex world around us."

George Kochell, instructor for the Greenbelt animation program, and Manager Barbara Simon introduced "Green Concrete" at the screening. Greenbelt resident Christopher Dingman, 18, who wrote and performed the original music for the animated short, was also present.

Editorial

FY 2005 Budget
Higher Taxes vs. Deep Cuts

It is unlikely that council will make significant changes to the proposed budget for the fiscal year or substantially reduce the proposed tax levy even though that budget proposes the highest tax rate increase in perhaps the city’s history on top of substantial increases in assessed valuations of properties within the city. To do so would take a will that does not seem apparent. Council lacks that will in part because the budget proposed is essentially the council’s budget. While City Manager Michael McLaughlin is responsible for submitting the budget proposal, he, following council guidelines, crafts that budget to reflect the policies and priorities set by council.

This Greenbelt council did not run for election to cut the budget or hold the line on taxes. Instead, all candidates, including those unelected, advocated bettering services. Citizens appearing before the council have generally sought improvements to city services not budget cuts. The only time a significant citizen turnout appeared at a budget worksession so far, they lobbied council to keep in the budget an item of special concern.

Nor have the citizens of Greenbelt done much so far to give council the will to make the hard choices needed to cut the budget. At the first public hearing on April 25, three citizens made only mild requests for minor cuts.

Unlike Congress, the Greenbelt City Council can not spend more than it gets. To maintain the present level of city services will require a tax increase.

As Mayor Judith Davis has pointed out, it will take a substantial sum – $145,000 – to cut the budget by one cent. To avoid a tax rate increase, council will need to reduce the budget by $870,000. The city is a service-oriented operation, relying primarily on paid employees. Salaries and related benefits form the greatest portion of city expenses. Thus, to significantly cut the budget, salary expenses for employees must be cut. Employees must be let go or vacant positions left unfilled. Either process means cutting city services.

No one publicly advocates that services be cut. City voters consistently re-elect incumbents or elect newcomers advocating similar platforms. Voters consistently rate city services as very good and even better than ever. Residents often say they want to stay in Greenbelt because it offers so much in the way of services.

Perhaps somewhere among the city’s population there are those not satisfied with the way things are. If so, they need to come out from hiding and make themselves known in the strongest terms. Otherwise all of us, come next September, can expect to pay more in taxes.

Greenbelt CARES

ACE hosted its annual meeting for PTA presidents. This meeting is used to give local schools an opportunity to discuss common concerns and solutions. There were representatives from Springhill Lake Elementary, St. Hugh’s School, Greenbelt Elementary and Eleanor Roosevelt High School. The schools were all interested in ways to increase parental involvement in PTAs and assistance with grant writing to benefit school programs, in addition to some programs specific to each school.

M. Burton's Big Win,
Cooke Scholarship

Michele Burton, the accomplished young woman of Laurel Hill Road whose achievements were summarized in last week’s News Review, has still more to appreciate this week. She is one of 25 out of 700 applicants to be awarded a Jack Kent Cooke 2005 scholarship which will provide $30,000 a year for up to three years of study. To vie for this scholarship, Burton had to write an essay about “When Does a Belief Become a Prejudice?”

Burton, currently a student at Prince George’s Community College, is not yet sure where she plans to use the scholarship. She is still awaiting word on her applications to four-year schools and is reluctant to have her hopes put in print. As for the scholarship, she says she is “grateful to have it.”

City Notes

Parking enforcement staff, in addition to routine duties, is giving particular attention to monitoring the fire lanes at 7501 Greenway Center Drive due to numerous complaints.

Planning staff attended meetings with the new owner of the former nursing home site to review preliminary development plans, Springhill Lake representatives regarding redevelopment and Fairfields to review plans for a multi-family housing development in the South Core of Greenbelt Station.

The Public Works horticulture crew planted 16 trees that were given to the city by the National Arboretum, completed planting water lilies which were left from Earth Day and fenced the new trees planted at the lake Park.

Shown at New Deal Café

Michael Smallwood’s photographs will be on exhibit at the New Deal Café during May. Primarily landscapes, many of them at national parks, the pictures were taken during his travels.

Smallwood is well known as an abstract painter. His paintings have been exhibited at the WPA, the Corcoran Gallery of Art and the Addison/Ripley Gallery in Washington, D.C., as well as in museums in North Carolina and in the GSA Art in Architecture Program in Atlanta.

In the last three years, Smallwood has turned more intensely to photography. Some photographs in the exhibit at the New Deal Café were included in “The Seductive Landscape,” a four-person group show at the William Parker Gallery this year in Washington, D.C. All the photographs in the exhibit were taken with a digital camera.

Each image was processed through Photoshop with no additions or overlays to enhance or change the image. Each photograph is based on what was perceived at the moment the picture was taken.

Monthly art exhibits at the New Deal Café are sponsored by the Friends of New Deal Café Arts, with supporting funds from Prince George’s County and the Prince George’s Arts Council.

Explore Russian Religious Icons

Explorations Unlimited will host a presentation by John Cahill on “The Russian Icon: A Window Into Heaven” on Friday, May 6. Cahill will discuss the icon (a religious image) that has been produced for centuries by monks, nuns and lay people of the Christian Church in a variety of media. The images depict Jesus Christ, the Mother of God and countless prophets and saints. Most are done on wood but some are found on other materials and on the walls of Catholic and Orthodox churches throughout the world. The divine images are a form of liturgical art whose function is essentially spiritual and present a true “window into heaven.” A collection of original Russian icons will be available for viewing during and after the presentation.

Cahill has B.A. and M.A. degrees and has taught a variety of courses in adult continuing education programs in several county public school systems and community colleges in Maryland, including the SAGE program for Prince George’s Community College. Some of the courses he has taught include ancient and Biblical Greek, classical and ecclesiastical Latin, classical mythology in the arts, Latin and Greek etymology, ancient Greek civilization and opera.

Explorations Unlimited is a speaker series held every Friday from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Community Center. This presentation will be held in the senior classroom. Everyone is welcome to attend and questions are encouraged. Call 301-397-2208 for more information.

“Peace and Purpose” at New Deal May 5

Spook Handy and Eric Maring will perform “songs of peace and purpose” at the New Deal Café on Thursday, May 5 at 7 p.m. Handy is currently on tour and has played in most of the 50 states. The themes of Handy’s songs range from spiritual to political, sometimes blatant, sometimes covert and are full of fictitious and real characters who have walked through his life.

Handy has performed in dozens of prestigious festivals throughout America, including the Kerrville Folk Festival and Susquehanna Music and Arts Festival and was named best folk artist by the “East Coast Rocker.”

Maring was recently hailed by The Washington Post as an “unwavering optimist . . . who believes in the power of positive music with all his heart and soul.” He has shared the stage with such folk greats as Dar Williams and Ellis Paul and has been all over the world, including India, where he traveled to perform for the Dalai Lama. In recent years he also studied flamenco guitar in Spain and the virtuoso techniques of guitarist Pierre Bensusan at his home in France.

Greenbelt Receives Tree City Award

Greenbelt has been named a Tree City USA by the National Arbor Day Foundation to honor its commitment to its community forest. It is the fifth year Greenbelt has received this national recognition.

Greenbelt is also the recipient of a Tree City USA Growth Award for demonstrating progress in its community forestry program in the following areas: planning and management, tree maintenance budget, tree planting and maintenance and street tree planting.

The Growth Award recognizes environmental improvement and higher levels of tree care in Tree City USA communities.

The Tree City USA program is sponsored by the National Arbor Day Foundation and the National Association of State Foresters and the USDA Forest Service.

Greenbelt has met the four standards to become a Tree City USA: a tree board or department, a tree care ordinance, a comprehensive community forestry program and an Arbor Day observance.

“The trees we plant and care for today will cool and beautify our communities, increase property values, help clean the air and water and conserve energy for years to come,” said John Rosenow, president of the National Arbor Day Foundation.

Our condolences to Sue and Judy Powell, 16 Court Ridge Road, on the death of Milton “Sonny” Powell their son and brother.

Congratulations to David E. Wolf, a 2000 graduate of Queen Anne High School, who received a $1,200 Joseph W. Mills Scholarship for his work as a graduate student at Washington State University. Wolf is a first-year graduate student studying geology. He is an introductory geology teaching assistant and plays intramural baseball and soccer. He received a bachelor’s degree from Allegheny College in Pennsylvania. Wolf is the son of Elizabeth Eng and Glenn Wolf of Greenbelt.

Congratulations also to Danielle Miller, a student at Hood College in Frederick, who was inducted into the Ionic Society on April 22. The Ionic Society was founded in 1976 with the purpose of honoring sophomores who successfully combined rigors of scholarship with outstanding leadership and service. Up to 21 sophomores are picked each spring to become members and during their tenure continue serving in projects involving both Hood College and Frederick.

Widowed Persons Group Starts May 19

The large table of people laughing and talking at a dinner meeting last Thursday night could have been a group of high school alumni reminiscing or perhaps a family celebrating some important event. In a way, it was a family gathering. These men and women had met in support groups for widows and widowers led by volunteers from the Patuxent Widowed Persons Service (PWPS). They had been members of two recent groups led by Leonie Penney of Greenbelt and Mabel Keys of Seabrook. The support programs consist of six-week discussion sessions covering both emotional and practical issues facing newly widowed persons and offering help in adapting to their new circumstances.

Following the six-week program, the participants are encouraged to keep in touch with each other by phone or occasional dinner meetings. They are also invited to join the sponsoring organization, PWPS, which holds monthly meetings and arranges social activities.

The next support group will be starting in Greenbelt on May 19. The six weekly sessions will be held in the Senior Lounge of the Community Center on Thursday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m.

The program is free and is open to widowed men and women of all ages, races and creeds. Pre-registration is required. For more information or to register call Leonie Penney at 301-441-8943 or Kathleen McFarland at 301-474-6892.

YIELD

Giving in charity is one of the important teachings of Islam, greatly rewarded by God and an obligation on every individual who has the means to do so.

"And the likeness of those, who spend their substance, seeking to please God and to strengthen their souls, is as a garden, high and fertile; heavy rain falls on it, but makes it yield a double increase in harvest, and if it receives not heavy rain, light moisture sufficeth it. God seeth well whatever ye do . . . O ye who believe, give of the good things which ye have earned, and of the fruits of the earth which we have produced for you . . ."

— The Holy Qur'an, 2:265 & 267

Baha'i Faith

"Progress is of two kinds, material and spiritual. The former is attained through observation of the surrounding existence and constitutes the foundation of civilization. Spiritual progress is through the breaths of the Holy Spirit and is the awakening of the conscious soul of man to perceive the reality of divinity."

ERHS' Kristy Picked for History Day

Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) student Dylan Kristy was selected by the Prince George's County History Day Committee to present his project on Communication at the Maryland National History Day Finals, Senior Division, on April 30 at Montgomery College, Rockville campus. Kristy's entry was the only ERHS entry chosen to represent the county in the state competition.

The theme of History Day this year is "Communication – A Key to Understanding." Kristy's exhibit focuses on how two presidents had different results in trying to communicate the purpose of a world peace-keeping organization to the American people. His premise is that the United States did not join the League of Nations during the term of Woodrow Wilson because of Wilson's inability to successfully communicate the League's ideas and ideals to the American people. On the other hand, Franklin D. Roosevelt was able to communicate the idea of a global peacekeeping organization to the American people in a manner they could understand. The United States then joined the United Nations in 1945.

"I chose this topic because I wanted to learn more about Franklin Roosevelt's presidency, which led me to comparing his politics to Wilson's." Kristy used resources of the Greenbelt Library for this project and said, "I'd like to thank the li-

Public Works Welcomes Visitors

by Jim Lara

While Greenbelters could participate in planting trees at Buddy Attick Park, they could also take a walk to the Public Works building which opened its facilities to the public in conjunction with the city's Earth Day celebration on Saturday, April 16. It was a bright, sunny day as people could look at the vehicles used to help clean the city and its neighborhoods.

The main exhibit of the open house was the greenhouse where over 6,000 plants are grown and kept in bloom. The whole structure is oval shaped and covered in layers of plastic that act as an insulation system, keeping the temperature always between 75 and 82 degrees. Horticultural Supervisor Brian Townsend said if it gets too warm, automatic fans will run to keep the temperature steady. During colder months a propane heater will kick on.

The plants are watered twice daily and get their supply from a tank that collects water from rain-fall. "They start out as seeds, then it takes two months for them to grow full size and we'll plant them into the landscape," said Townsend. Some of the plants are distinguished by their colors. The Begonia Dragon will have red flowers adorning it while the Star Gold has yellow flowers. The Lantana plant stood out for its lemon smell.

Townsend added that the department plants a high number of trees every year along with the flowers at areas like the Greenbelt Community Center and on Hanover Parkway. "We also try to maintain the trees by removing any dead branches so they can be standing for years to come," Townsend said. They also provided about 70 trees for the planting ceremony by the park lake.

The Public Works Open House provided educational materials on recycling and environmental safety.

Family Activities

Families were invited to take hay rides around the complex. Kids enjoyed these as well as going inside police cars to operate the sirens and lights. All the while visitors were treated to hot dogs and lemonade that were served by the public works staff. Local resident Jennifer Wilson brought her 4-year-old son Jaime after spending some time in the park. "My son loved riding on the hay truck and I thought all the plants displayed looked beautiful," said Wilson.

Superintendent of Operations Carolyn Clemens was pleased to see everyone having a good time as this was the sixth year the building has been opened to the public. "It gives us an opportunity to meet the citizens and let them see what we do," she said. Besides taking up recycling and trash, public works is involved in snow removal, paving walkways and horticulture. Clemens is hopeful that the open house will get even better the next couple of years as the department is in the process of getting permits to break ground on a new building and to expand the size of the administrative building.

Footloose

Northway Revisited

By late Saturday morning the rain relents and spring pulls a hiker to the blue-blazed trail near the end of Northway. The way leads north into the inviting opening trod by many but unvisited by oneself since last fall.

Trees are beginning to leaf out; in the distance a few stray dogwoods ghost their white plumage. In boggy patches congregations of skunk cabbage shine glossily. A familiar foot bridge crosses the creek and its muddy water, here sluggish, there gurgling. Around a bend spreads a tumult of wild daisies. A faint whirr of traffic on the Baltimore-Washington Parkway inhabits the air.

From a twin oak, hefty trunks rise straight – 70, 80 feet high – though the joint base is hollowed out. Trees that couldn't weather the winter are strewn about, some notched at an angle in live brethren. Others from earlier times are tilted against the rusty fence that's reached soon enough, the fence with faded signs that read, U.S. Property – No Trespassing.

Now the trail, trending westward, parallels the border for the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center. Breaks in the high cyclone fence not caused by fallen trees clearly track to creatures other than deer that roam the woods on both sides. A hiker is tempted to follow a well-worn path that winds to the fields beyond, where corn or soybeans or other crops will rise in a couple of months.

With or without such a diversion, the backs of GHI multi-units on Ridge Road soon show up in the middle distance; Greenbelt Elementary School appears in about a half-hour at a good pace from the start. On the way back a young couple exchanges greetings and the thought fills the air: How fortunate we are to still have this retreat and the matching woods beyond the fence. In too many places bulldozers bust in and new houses follow. We need stretches of untrammelled land where we can breathe free and be reminded of what so much of the area, the region, the world was before humans exerted their sway. And to be ready to hike in when the mood strikes.

Further, if another mood strikes on leaving Northway, you can satisfy it a mile away at any of four eateries at Roosevelt Center – Beijing, Chef Lou, Generous Joe's and the New Deal Café, not to mention the Co-op grocery. And from there you might even walk home.

– Eli Flam
